More information about Paeonia lactiflora

Peonies like moist and nutrient-rich soil and a spot in the sun or half-shade with lots of light.

Do not plant the peony's rhizomes too deep, as this can cause the plant to flower poorly.

The growing points or noses only needs to be 1-2 centimetres in the ground. You can plant peonies in the fall, winter or spring, because peonies are hardy. Please be advised that peonies will only give a few flowers in the first year. The rhizomes are available in different sizes; 1-2N (1 to 2 growing points/noses), 2-3N (2 to 3 growing points/noses) and size 3-5N (3-5 growing points/noses). A larger size generally produces more flowers and faster.

If planted in the fall, the rhizome have more time to make roots and the plant will be stronger and produce more flowers. The second year it will give plenty of flowers. After a number of years, the peony plants can be divided. You can then divide the rhizomes and replant them in a different place.
